I can't stand back.
This man is innocent.
I know; I saw it in a dream. Pilate must not execute this man.
I'm sending him a message.

We're still outside with a crowd. It seems that only the real opponents of Jesus are still here though. Casual bystanders have gone.

Off to the market.
I need to get some bitter herbs while they're still fresh for tonight's meal.

The crowd is shouting for Barabbas - I might have expected it; the crowd is mostly the people from the Sandhedrin.

They want Barabbas.
Why don't they shout
for Jesus? It looks like a complete stitch-up.

I can hear shouting
inside the Praetorium.
It sounds as though someone is being flogged. Could it be Jesus?

They've just brought Jesus out. He is covered in blood, but they have put a crown of thorns
on his head and given him a robe.

Pilate is making a show of Jesus. He has put him in front of the crowd and has just said "Behold the man".

The crowd isn't impressed.
They are calling for Jesus
to be crucified.

That's the job finished.
I can come in from the fields now and take the rest of the day easy -
good idea with Passover
coming up.

It's only six hours since
they arrested Jesus.
Now Pilate is saying
"Behold your King."
He's given in.

That's it. They're going to crucify him. Pilate's going in - the soldiers
are taking Jesus.
It's all over.

Jesus has been condemned. Pilate didn't listen - or his hand was forced.
I think this will be held against us for a long time.
