Someone's coming.
It's Mary Magdalene.
She's hurrying back from the tomb. I wonder what she has left behind?

Apparently the Tomb has been opened - violently.
Jesus' body has gone.
We need to go and see
what's happened.

I'd better tell Mary the mother of Jesus what's happened. She will be distressed, but she ought to know.

Mary the mother of Jesus is still distressed, but I need to see the tomb again. I'm off now.

Joanna and I have arrived at the house of Mary the Mother of John Mark.
There are some disciples
here - they'll know what's happening.

There are eight disciples here. We've told them about the tomb but they don't seem to know what's happening.

We're back at Zebedee's house with Mary the mother of Jesus. John is out - apparently he and Peter have gone to the tomb.

I'm not going out again.
It's far too dangerous to talk about the empty tomb today.

The body of Jesus has gone, but the graveclothes are still there. Why would someone do that? To move the body you would take the clothes.

I'm confused about
what has happened.
Who would open the tomb like that? Where is everyone? I need to go off on my own and think.

The tomb is empty;
something strange
has happened to Jesus.
Could he have been raised from the dead?

I've come back to the garden, outside the tomb. The tomb is empty; I'm going to sit here and think about things.

Looked in at home.
Mary is still in shock,
but Salome is looking after her.

I've told the others about the empty tomb. Some of the women had already arrived and told them, but they are sceptical even now.

Well, they seem to accept that the tomb is empty
at least. I've a feeling there's more, but I can't be sure and I can prove nothing.

I've been here long enough.
One last look into the tomb and I think I'll go back to Zebedee's house.
